A STRANGE STAR

Birth of New Life Which Was to Shine Over the Earth.

Conference of the Beasts of the Nativity as Portrayed by Imaginative Writer.

"CAREFUL, Brother, thy horns! Keep thy head straight. Remember, tonight we share but the one stall between us. The man and his mate, there, have thine." The little tawny-hided ox of Palestine on the farther side leaned hard against the stable wall.

"'Tis a strange star that shines tonight," his yoke-fellow answered, sighing restlessly as he turned back his gaze from the open door. Even with care their horns clicked in the narrow space. "If men must take my bed, why did they not turn us out into the free air? The grass would have dew on it tonight—and I could watch the star."

"Ho!" snorted the little gray ass which had carried hither the woman who lay stretched on the straw between them. "What grass wouldst thou pluck from the cobblestones of the city?"

"Aye," lowed the first ox. "There is hay here; eat and be still. The star is no concern of thine."

"The star shineth on the whole broad earth, Brother. He hath the peaked hills to wander in, and the dark valleys, the fields and the towns alike. I wish I were free like the star."

"Then, like him, thou wouldst come slipping in at our stable door again. Hey, come off thy knees! We must sleep standing," his mate grunted warningly.

"Hush, Brother. There is something wondrous in my old stall! Something very small and white! It gleameth as with hoarfrost in the star's light. It hath the smell of lilies. It moveth. The star can stroke it with its long, pale tongues." He leaned longingly against the barrier which shut him away, until it creaked.

The little ass slipped his soft ears between his own bars and sniffed inquiringly. "Why, 'tis a child!" he whinnied with delight. "Children are lovely things. His small fingers will play with my mane and he will sing little songs to me as I bear him along. Look up, little Master. We will see great days together."

"There, that serveth thee right!" reproved the far ox as the woman made a quick motion toward the inquisitive nose. "Thy black muzzle belongeth in thine own manger, Brother Ass."

"She did but brush it aside," the little gray beast breathed contentedly. "She is pleased that we know her son. No fear, Brother Ox. Her husband will not take his staff to us. She is gentle, this woman of mine. Her child, too, will love us."

But the ox had not drawn back. He knelt there, his broad forehead pressed against the bars, his wondering eyes fixed on the new life which was to shine over the whole broad earth with a brighter glory than that wondering star's.—John Breck, in the Detroit News.

GROWTH OF CHRISTMAS TREE

Abandoned Farms in Foothills of Green Mountains in Vermont Provide the Yuletide Sprouts.

SINCE five million Christmas trees are annually shipped out of Vermont, it is only natural to wonder where they all come from. They must come from farms—not farms operated to produce the Christmas tree crop, but abandoned farms where the trees have planted and reared themselves.

These abandoned farms lie in high valleys in the foothills of the Green mountains. One may see sections covered by thirty-odd farms, once thriving settlements, but now all but two or three may be unoccupied. Such land, once under the plow is gradually coming back to forest. Along the fern-choked, faintly-traced furrows, young spruces come up and in the open sunshine take on a vivid green. And more than that—the symmetrical branches are a lively green clear to the ground.

Christmas trees cannot be cut in areas of spruce forest, because when they grow in dense clusters the under branches die for want of light, and hence the trees have no value as decorative Christmas trees.

Few, indeed, see the harvest. One or two lonely partridge hunters, perhaps, will see it as it lies covered with the first early snow squalls in the mountains. But back in October, when the days have not lost all of the mellowness of autumn, a gang of twenty choppers will have been busily at work cutting the scattering young spruces and tying them with twine.

The cutting and bundling is the easiest part of the harvest, for the trees must be hauled for miles to the railroad, and at this time of year the mountain roads are nothing more than frozen ruts and waterholes. Despite this fact, however, heavy two-horse wagons and even motor trucks, bristling with great criblike bodies, struggle slowly out, loaded high with the trees. Two horses are able to draw out at a load about seventy trees of average size.

At the chosen town on the railroad every disused spot is hired and a mountain of trees begins to grow, till eight thousand of them may be packed in a solid mass.—St. Nicholas.

HOUSEWORK A BURDEN.

Woman's lot is a weary one at best. But with backache and other distressing kidney ills life indeed becomes a burden. Doan's Kidney Pills have made life brighter for many Gettysburg women. Ask your neighbor. Read what Mrs. Chas. Hunter, 127 W. High St., Gettysburg, says: "I was never bothered in a serious way with kidney trouble, but a number of years ago my kidneys were not in proper condition. Sharp pains darted through my back and this trouble made housework very hard to take care of. My back ached most of the time but the pains were worse in the morning, directly after getting up. My troubles were many and my sight was blurred by tiny spots and specks and I felt tired and was inclined to be nervous. My kidneys acted irregularly and as I had seen Doan's Kidney Pills so highly recommended, I purchased two boxes of them at the People's Drug Store. It took but two boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills to drive all these signs of kidney complaint from me."

Catarrhal Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result. Unless the inflammation can be reduced and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Many cases of deafness are caused by catarrh, which is an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces. Hall's Catarrh Medicine acts thru the blood on the mucous surfaces of the system.

There's a new joy in giving this year

Because your money buys so much more

Our store is brilliant with the gifts that fill every department, and there is new delight in selecting holiday remembrances when one can choose articles of so much greater worth than heretofore, and pay no more for them. Then those who have found Xmas such a tax on them in the past will discover that very much less money will provide the supply of gifts that will gratify them and make their families and friends happy for the Great Occasion.

We have a large display of new toys with plenty of room for the little folks to come in throngs to see them. Don't wait, for the busy, tiresome days near Xmas, when we will have so much less to show you and so much less time and opportunity to serve you satisfactorily. Come and bring the children now, while everything is here, displayed to its best advantage, easy to see and select, comfortable for the children, too.

Christmas Ideas That Appeal

What a wonderful month December is! Everybody is thinking about somebody else.

It is the unselfish month, when we think vastly more about what we shall give than what we receive. And what a pleasure it is to hunt for the thing that will delight some friend—choosing the one that will confer the utmost possible satisfaction. Now the time is here when gift decisions must be made, and so many unsolved puzzles are still on most minds. Don't struggle with such problems at home. Come where the multitudes of gift things are on display, to make the choosing easy and so satisfying. Here are the beautiful things, the useful things, the comforts and luxuries of life, and all those giveable necessaries that make such pleasing gifts.

HERE ALL GIFT PROBLEMS ALMOST SOLVE THEMSELVES.

Our Ready-to-Wear Dept.

Why worry about a gift for wife, mother, sister or sweetheart when a visit to our Ready-to-Wear Department will solve your every worry?
